The Greying of Asia Louise Hateley, Gerald Tan, 2003 This book examines the causes and consequences of rapid ageing in Asian countries using the case of Singapore to illustrate many of the issues involved. The centrepiece of this book is a detailed analysis of Singapore's Central Provident Fund CPF which considers whether the CPF on its own will be able to cater adequately for the financial needs of senior Singaporeans. Alternative approaches are also examined in order to suggest ways in which the Singapore approach to the care of the aged might be improved. Another important chapter deals with the tragic phenomenon of elderly female suicide of which Singapore has one of the highest rates in the world.
