Marine Pathology Outlook | Episode 703 Hosted by Dr. Lena Ortiz

Late yesterday, a 3.4-foot gray whale calf was found stranded on a beach in Pacific Grove, California. Rescuers from the Monterey Bay Marine Mammal Center arrived within two hours and began assessing the animal on the sand.

Dr. Lena Ortiz: Before we get into the details, I want to remind listeners that this episode discusses animal suffering and may be difficult for some people. Please take care of yourself while you listen.

Initial Observations

When examined, the calf was emaciated and showed several superficial lacerations across its flukes and dorsal fin. Rescuers noted that the animal was unresponsive to touch and did not attempt to swim away when approached. Veterinarians estimated the calf's age at roughly six months, based on its length and the presence of fetal folds still visible along its body.

The nearest known mother-calf pair had been sighted about 14 miles south of the rescue site two days earlier. Researchers from the Cascadia Cetacean Research Group confirmed that the mother was not present in the area during the rescue.

Blood samples were drawn from the calf's pectoral region. Preliminary results showed a white blood cell count of 31,200 cells per microliter, which is more than three times the upper limit for a healthy juvenile. Platelet counts were also low, at 118,000 per microliter. Hemoglobin was measured at 9.1 grams per deciliter, well below the expected range for an animal of this size.

Dr. Ortiz: Those numbers tell us the calf is fighting an infection and losing blood faster than it can replace it. Without intervention, it would not have survived the night.

Treatment and Transport

The calf was transported to the center's rehabilitation facility in a padded sling filled with seawater. The trip took 47 minutes. Upon arrival, veterinarians began intravenous fluid therapy and started a broad-spectrum antibiotic. The lacerations were cleaned and treated with a topical ointment.

Dr. Ortiz: We chose an antibiotic that covers both bacteria and fungi, because wounds from boat strikes can carry a mix of both. We will adjust the treatment once we have culture results back.

The calf was placed in a shallow pool with filtered seawater. Staff monitored its breathing rate every 15 minutes during the first 24 hours. By the end of the first day, the calf had begun to lift its head and respond to voices.

Feeding Challenges

Feeding a stranded calf is one of the most delicate parts of rehabilitation. Too much milk too quickly can cause fluid in the lungs, while too little leaves the animal weak. The team began with small amounts of a specialized formula delivered through a soft tube passed into the stomach.

Dr. Ortiz: We are not trying to fatten this calf up. We are trying to give it just enough energy to stabilize, and then we will increase the volume slowly over several days.

By the second day, the calf was taking the full feeding on its own. Its blood work had improved, with the white blood cell count dropping to 18,400 cells per microliter and hemoglobin rising to 11.6 grams per deciliter. Platelet counts had also returned to a normal range.

Dr. Ortiz: Those changes are exactly what we hoped to see. They tell us the body is responding to the antibiotics and the fluids.

Long-Term Plan

The calf will remain in rehabilitation for an estimated four to six months. Its diet will be gradually switched from formula to a mix of fish, including herring and mackerel, as it learns to feed underwater. Staff will also begin introducing it to the sounds of other whales through underwater speakers, since calves learn many of their vocalizations from their mothers.

Dr. Ortiz: The goal is release, not captivity. Every decision we make is measured against whether it helps this animal return to the ocean and survive on its own.

Public updates will be posted on the center's website and social media channels. Volunteers are not needed at this time, but donations to support the rehabilitation effort are welcome.

Dr. Ortiz: Thank you for listening. We will be back with the next update in two days.

Listening Session: Community Voices on Proposed Transit Expansion

Hosted by Dr. Lena Ortiz

Dr. Ortiz: Welcome to tonight's listening session. We have gathered here to hear from residents about the proposed expansion of the Riverside Transit Authority's bus rapid transit network. Before we begin, I want to remind everyone that this is a public meeting and that all comments will be recorded and transcribed.

The proposed expansion would add 14.2 miles of dedicated bus lanes, 22 new stations, and increase service frequency on the Riverside Corridor from every 15 minutes to every 7 minutes during peak hours. The estimated total cost is $186 million, with construction scheduled to begin in spring 2027 and finish by late 2029.

Dr. Ortiz: We have set aside two hours for this session. Each speaker will have three minutes. If you have written comments, you may submit them at the table in the back.

Mayor Pro Tem Andrea Whitfield: Thank you, Dr. Ortiz. I want to begin by saying that I support the goals of this project. Our downtown is growing, and we cannot keep adding cars to the roads. But I have heard from many small business owners on Elm Street who are worried about losing parking. We need to make sure they are part of the conversation.

Dr. Ortiz: Noted. We have scheduled a separate meeting with Elm Street merchants for March 12.

Resident Comments

Maria Gonzalez, 34, Riverside: I live on the east side and I work downtown. Right now my commute is 52 minutes on a good day. If this bus lane means I can get to work in 30 minutes, I will ride it every day. But the stations need shelters. Standing in the rain for 20 minutes is not going to get people to switch from their cars.

Dr. Ortiz: Shelters are included in the current design. Each station will have a roof, lighting, and a real-time arrival display.

James Okafor, 71, Riverside: I am a retired teacher and I volunteer at the library. The bus stop on Oak Street is two blocks from the nearest crosswalk. Many of my students' parents are elderly and cannot walk that far. Will the new stations be closer together?

Dr. Ortiz: The average spacing will be about one mile, which is similar to the current system. However, we are adding a mid-block crossing at Oak Street as part of the project.

Priya Nandakumar, 28, Riverside: I am a graduate student at the university and I rely on the bus every day. I support the expansion, but I am concerned about the noise and vibration from articulated buses. My apartment is directly above the proposed route. Will there be any mitigation for residents living close to the corridor?

Dr. Ortiz: That is a valid concern. The project includes sound walls in three residential segments and quieter pavement on the entire corridor. We will share the noise study results with you after this session.

Written Comments

Dr. Ortiz: We received 47 written comments before tonight. Many of them ask about the timeline for the Elm Street merchant meeting, which I have already addressed. Others ask about bicycle lanes. The current plan does not include bicycle lanes on the corridor, but the city's bicycle master plan calls for a parallel route on Second Avenue, which is one block away.

Mayor Pro Tem Andrea Whitfield: I would like to see that parallel route built before construction begins on the bus lanes, so that cyclists have a safe alternative during the work.

Dr. Ortiz: We will add that request to the record. The next public meeting will be held on April 9 at the Riverside Community Center, and we will present updated plans at that time.

Dr. Ortiz: This session is now closed. Thank you to everyone who attended and shared their thoughts.
