Impact of leadership on productivity
Reading Comprehension

Leadership plays a crucial role in shaping the productivity of an organization. Effective leaders inspire and motivate their teams, contributing in a clear cause that aligns with organizational goals. This alignment fosters a sense of purpose among employees, driving them to perform at their best.

Good leadership also involves creating an environment where team members feel valued and supported. When leaders communicate clearly and encourage collaboration, it enhances teamwork and innovation. Additionally, leaders who recognize and reward individual contributions can foster morale and motivate employees to exceed expectations.

On the other hand, poor leadership can have detrimental effects on productivity, such as division, conflict, rejections, and ineffective communication. This can lead to confusion and disengagement among employees. In such environments, productivity may suffer as employees may feel disengaged and underutilized.

In summary, the impact of leadership on productivity is significant. Strong leaders not only enhance the performance of their teams but also contribute to the overall success of the organization. By fostering a positive work culture and encouraging effective management, leaders can drive productivity and achieve remarkable results.

Journal of Reading , 1988 The Need for Extensive Reading in the Production of English Academic Writing by Non-English

Speakers Housseine Bachiri, 2017-11-13 Doctoral Thesis Dissertation from the year 2017 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Linguistics Ibn Tofail University Department of English language English abstract This dissertation arises from an attempt to answer questions about whether Moroccan first and second year university students of English as a foreign language EFL need extensive reading in order to produce academic texts By using two different questionnaires along with an extensive reading experiment at Mohammed V University it has been possible to analyze and discuss both ethnographic and numerical data obtained from the aforementioned research instruments The participants in the research were Moroccan university students and professors Results indicate a myriad of shortcomings in the teaching of reading and writing in Moroccan higher education Classroom activities demonstrate a lack of students engagement and interaction especially in the reading session Results also show students willingness and keenness to commence reading extensively because they feel empowered confident and fluent over time Extensive reading a receptive skill and academic writing a productive skill are both interactive constructive and complementary In extensive reading students learn to increase their reading speed and comprehension while simultaneously expanding their lexicon whereas in academic writing they learn to think about the context audience and purpose of their piece of writing In doing so they learn to write with simplicity accuracy clarity and an analytical eye For students these skills are new and they will ipso facto get used to them after they start writing Development of literacy de facto relies enormously upon effective learning of reading and writing for students consume knowledge through the former and produce it through the latter Given this both extensive reading and academic writing can solidly transform students into future writers scholars thinkers and academics whose intellectual contributions will change the course of our country for the better Therefore the pedagogy adopted for the teaching of reading and writing in Moroccan higher education should be reconsidered Reading Comprehension Instruction, 1783-1987 H.
