Proceedings International Pig Veterinary Society,1980 Aujeszky's Disease G. Wittmann,S.A. Hall,2012-12-06 Aujeszky's disease AD is increasing in Europe and it has become a serious problem in some of the countries of the European Communities EC The control and eradication of the disease is very difficult since AD virus ADV evokes a persistent latent infection in its main host the pig Such latent infection can also occur when vaccinated pigs are exposed to the virus In view of this the Commission of the European Communities CEC thought it necessary to have a survey on the current state of knowledge on AD and ADV Therefore a seminar was organised by the Federal Research Institute for Animal Virus Diseases in Tübingen Federal Republic of Germany and held there on June 9 and 10 1981 The seminar was a part of the Animal Pathology Programme of the CEC The seminar was attended by 44 participants from the countries of the EC and 29 papers were presented which covered a wide field of research on AD properties of the virus diagnostic procedures immunity and pathogenesis vaccination latent infection epidemiology control and eradication Scientists from different institutes in the EC who have been working on AD thus had the opportunity to exchange their knowledge as well as to give and receive impetus for further scientific work Furthermore many details were given which are of interest for the veterinary authorities with regard to control and eradication of AD Circular ,1959 Proceedings, International Pig Veterinary Society International Pig Veterinary Society. Congress,1988 New-generation vaccines and novel vaccinal strategies against infectious diseases of livestock, wild and companion animals Denis Archambault,Raul Manzano Roman,Suresh Kumar Tikoo,Christophe Chevalier,Brad Pickering,2023-08-25 Emerging and re-emerging infections in particular those caused by viruses are expected to rise in correlation among other factors with climate changes Antibiotic resistance is another issue that will limit the therapeutic arsenal against bacterial and parasitic infections Therefore one must be adequately prepared to overcome and prevent current and novel infections and vaccination remains the optimal way to fight infectious diseases in humans This is also true for many impacting diseases of livestock and companion animals to which there are no available vaccines First attenuated and inactivated and second subunit generation vaccines have their limitations To overcome this efforts have been made in recent years to develop novel vaccine types such as virus like particle VLP viral vector and DNA based vaccines in humans and animals The recent success in utilizing RNA technology based vaccines to fight SARS CoV 2 to limit the severity of clinical symptoms and mortality constitutes a promising way to develop such vaccines against animal diseases Development of novel molecules or materials with adjuvant or immunostimulatory activity to adequately stimulate the innate immune response and therefore the pathogen specific adaptive immune response as well as the identification of suitable antigenic material that would bring broad protection against infectious agent variants are other key issues to be considered in developing safe and innovative immunization strategies Journal of the National Cancer Institute ,1968 The Veterinary Bulletin ,1986 New Breeder's Gazette ,1889 Circular ,1949 Pediatric Primary Care
