

Notes from Underground (Everymans Library, 271) by Larissa Volokhonsky

Book-Australia-0110Dec10NotesCondition

I am a sick man...I am a wretched man. With this sentence Dostoevsky begins a work which marks the frontier not only between nineteenth- and twentieth-century fiction, but between two centuries' versions of the self. For the unnamed narrator of Notes from Underground is an multiplicity of selves, at war with the others - and at war with everything else. A former official who has retreated from society into an underground existence, the narrator is passionate, obsessive and self-contradictory: narrative which serves as a devastating attack on social utopianism and an assertion of man's essentially irrational nature. Richard and Larissa Volokhonsky, whose Dostoevsky translations have become the standard version, give us a remarkably faithful edition of Dostoevsky's classic: which conveys both the tragedy and the humour of the original Russian.

My Personal Review:

The first words of this deeply disturbing, but powerful, novel are I am a sick man, ...I am a spiteful man, and these may refer equally to the main character and to the author. Dostoevsky has written an amazing portrait of a lower, whose uneducated, sick thoughts spill out on the pages in demented brilliance. The novel is a product of European cynicism, nihilism, and inertia, all of which reached a certain height in the parochial upper circles of 19th century Russia. Nobody could write such a book without some personal acquaintance with the mean people of this anti-hero. The main character, who does nothing except hide from the world, is a total misfit, a loser in life at home, at work, and in love—a jerk, a cheater, a doof, a geek in modern American parlance—yet through Dostoevsky's clear prose, we dive into his muddled soul. Actually, I had no brief for suffering, nor am I arguing for well-being. He writes, I argue for...my own whim and the assurance of my right to it, if need be. He is apart from society, recognizes no social obligation. He argues that suffering is still better than mere consciousness, because it sharpens the awareness of your being, therefore suffering is in man's interest. Some other will argue that is not

Dostoevsky P. H. Brazier,2016-06-02 As a writer and prophet Dostoevsky was no academic theologian yet his writings are deeply theological his life beliefs even his epilepsy all had a role in generating his theology and eschatology Dostoevsky s novels are riven with paradoxes are deeply dialectical and represent a criticism of religion offered in the service of the gospel In this task he presented a profound understanding and portrait of humanity Dostoevsky s novels chart the movement of the human into death either the movement through paradox and Christlikeness into Christ s cross a soteriology often characterized by the apophatic negation and self denial what we may term the Mark of Abel leading to salvation and resurrection or conversely the movement of those who refuse Christ s invitation to be redeemed and continue to fall into a self willed death and a self generated hell the Mark of Cain This eschatology becomes a theological axiom which he unceasingly warned people of in his mature works Startlingly original stripped of all religious pretence some prostitutes and criminals might just have a better understanding of salvation than some of the pietistic wealthy and cultured classes

Dostoevsky as a prophet forewarned of the politicized humanistic delusions of the twentieth century a prophet crying out through the wilderness

Better Worlds Peter Roberts,John Freeman-Moir,2013-02-21 Better Worlds Education Art and Utopia provides a fresh examination of utopia and education Adopting an interdisciplinary approach and drawing on literature and the visual arts as well as traditional non fiction sources the authors explore utopia not as a model of social perfection but as the active imaginative building of better worlds Utopian questions they argue lie at the heart of education and addressing such questions demands attention not just to matters of theoretical principle but to the particulars of everyday life and experience Taking utopia seriously in educational thought also involves a consideration of that which is dystopian Utopia this book suggests is not something that is fixed final or ever fully realized instead it must be constantly recreated and education as an ongoing process of reflection action and transformation has a central role to play in this process

Miro Roman and his AI Alice_ch3n81 develop a playful scenario in which they propose coding as the new literacy of information. They convey knowledge in the form of a project model that links the fields of architecture and information through two interwoven narrative strands in an infinite flow of real books. Focusing on the intersection of information technology and architectural formulation, the authors create an evolving intellectual reflection on digital architecture and computer science. The Books in My Life Colin Wilson, 1998. Film Negation and Freedom. Capitalism and Romantic Critique explores cinema in relation to the critical tradition in modern philosophy and its heritage in Romantic aesthetics. Synthesising a variety of discursive fields and traditions including Early German Romanticism, Frankfurt School critical theory and the aesthetic philosophy of Jacques Rancière. Film Negation and Freedom outlines a radical new approach to film by re-examining the work of Arthur Penn and Lindsay Anderson. A distinction between Light and Dark Romanticism is introduced as a means of interpreting cinema's relationship with capitalism as well as dualistic concepts such as stillness and motion, passivity and activity, pain and pleasure. Film Negation and Freedom revitalises our understanding of modern audio-visual media as well as the aesthetic, philosophical and political conditions of Romantic subjectivity, artistic practice and spectatorship. The Catholic Periodical and Literature Index, 2004. F.M.
