Koch's and Microbiology

1890 Robert Koch, a German physician and microbiologist, was the first to prove that bacteria cause disease. He is known as the father of bacteriology.

1890 Koch's Postulates are a set of four criteria that must be met to prove that a specific microorganism causes a specific disease. They are: 1. The microorganism must be found in all cases of the disease. 2. The microorganism must be isolated from the diseased host. 3. The microorganism must be grown in pure culture. 4. The microorganism must be shown to cause the disease in a healthy host.

New Prokaryotes and Eukaryotes

PROKARYOTES
Prokaryotes are simple cells that lack a nucleus and other organelles. They are the most common type of cell on Earth and are found in a wide variety of environments. Prokaryotes are divided into two main groups: bacteria and archaea.

EUKARYOTES
Eukaryotes are more complex cells that have a nucleus and other organelles. They are found in all multicellular organisms and some single-celled organisms. Eukaryotes are divided into three main groups: plants, animals, and fungi.

The Cell Theory

The cell theory is a fundamental principle of biology. It states that all living organisms are made of cells, and that cells are the basic units of life. The cell theory was developed by three scientists: Matthias Schleiden, Rudolf Virchow, and Robert Brown.

1. All living organisms are made of cells.
2. The cell is the basic unit of life.
3. All cells come from pre-existing cells.

Robert Hooke's Micrographia

Robert Hooke's Micrographia is a book that describes the structure of various organisms as seen through a microscope. It was the first book to show detailed drawings of microorganisms, and it played a key role in the development of the cell theory.
