

Cell (Plasma) Membrane- Structure, Composition, Functions

- Membranes are lipid structures that separate the contents of the compartment they surround from its environment.
- Plasma membranes separate the cell from its environment while other membranes define the boundaries of organelles and provide a matrix upon which complex chemical reactions can occur.
- The plasma membrane, also known as the cell surface membrane or plasmalemma, defines the boundary of the cell.
- It is a phospholipid bilayer with embedded proteins that encloses every living cell.
- It regulates the movement of materials into and out of the cell and facilitates electrical signalling between them.
- It is said to be semi-permeable because it allows certain molecules but not others to enter into the cell.
- It serves some specific functions such as controlling the flow of nutrients and ions into and out of the cells, mediating the response of a cell to external stimuli (a process called signal transduction), and interacting with bordering cells.

CELL MEMBRANE

Structure and composition of plasma membrane

All biological membranes are constructed according to a standard pattern. They consist of a continuous bilayer of amphipathic lipids approximately 5 nm thick, into which proteins are embedded. In addition, some membranes also carry carbohydrates (mono- and oligosaccharides) on their exterior, which are bound to lipids and proteins. The proportions of lipids, proteins, and carbohydrates differ markedly depending on the type of cell and membrane.

- The plasma membrane consists of a lipid bilayer containing embedded and peripheral proteins. The major component of membranes is lipids.

technological applications of these membranes The first two chapters deal with biomembranes providing an introduction to the membranes of eucaryotes and a description of the evolution of membranes The following chapters are concerned with different aspects of lipids including the physical properties of model membranes composed of lipid protein mixtures lateralphase separation of lipids and proteins and measurement of lipid protein bilayer diffusion Other chapters deal with the flexibility of fluid bilayers the closure of bilayers into vesicles which attain a large variety of different shapes and applications of lipid vesicles and liposomes Part B covers membrane adhesion membrane fusion and the interaction of biomembranes withpolymer networks such as the cytoskeleton The first two chapters of this part discuss the generic interactions of membranes from the conceptual point of view The following two chapters summarize the experimental work on two different bilayer systems The next chapter deals with the process ofcontact formation focal bounding and macroscopic contacts between cells The cytoskeleton within eucaryotic cells consists of a network of relatively stiff filaments of which three different types of filaments have been identified As explained in the next chapter much has been recently learned aboutthe interaction of these filaments with the cell membrane The final two chapters deal with membrane fusion    Author's Guide to Publication in Plant Physiology Journals Paulette M.
