In this book the contributors take one dataset as their object of scholarship informed by discursive psychology Bakhtin and poststructural positions to investigate the particulars of the language used in interviews about possible careers conducted both before and after an internship in a university science laboratory

Across this collection some contributors focus on data driven analyses in which the authors present more macro perspectives on the use of language in science career talk whereas others see the data using particular lenses that provide intelligible and fruitful perspectives on what and how students and interviewer talk careers in science

Other contributors propose to transform the database into different representations that allows researchers to single out and demonstrate particular dimensions of discourse

Thus these contributions roughly fall into three categories that are treated under the sections entitled

The Ethics of Medical Involvement in Capital Punishment Joseph B.R. Gaie,2006-04-11 The morality of capital punishment has been debated for a long time This however has 1 not resulted in the settlement of the question either way Philosophers are still divided In this work I am not addressing the morality of capital punishment per se My question is different but related It is this Whether or not capital punishment is morally right is it moral or immoral for medical doctors to be involved in the practice To deal with this question I start off in Chapter One delineating the sort of involvement the medical associations consider to be morally problematic for medical doctors in capital punishment They make a distinction between what they call 2 medicalisation of and involvement in capital punishment and argue that there is a moral distinction between the two Whilst it is morally acceptable for doctors to be involved in capital punishment according to the medical associations it is immoral to medicalise the practice I clarify this position and show what moral issues arise I then suggest that there should not be a distinction between the two The medical associations argue that the medicalisation of capital punishment especially the use by medical doctors of lethal injection to execute condemned prisoners is immoral and therefore should be prohibited because it involves doctors in doing what is against the aims of medicine
